

Tech students rev engines at their 3rd annual car race

By Michele Ward

Spoke students had a blast every year in the excitement and cheering they find only by participating in auto races.

Spoke's technical students enthusiastically accepted the challenge of building the car races which take place on campus all day long. "We had the first car race in 1988 and they have been doing well since then."

"The race is an intense eventing that is held through the campus right in the middle of the road. The students have been working on the car design and the engine for the last year and are now in the final stages of construction. The cars are not just made to look like a show car but they are built to be a show car and they are built to be a show car."

The students are planning the next car race in 1991. It is a 1/4 mile race and is held on the campus. The students are planning to make the cars as fast as possible, but they are also planning to make them as safe as possible.

Spoke and the other cars have been built by the students. The cars are built by the students and they are built by the students. The cars are built by the students and they are built by the students.

Helpers direct night students

By Colleen Robinson

The Night Helpers program at Central Oregon Community College is a very important service. Students employed as night helpers perform many jobs, such as checking night students out during their scheduled classes or making just one.

Night helpers have been directing students through the college's entrance through the Center for Continuing Learning (CCL) since last fall. This is the second year that CCL has selected the night staff to help in this program, its success. The first year was in September 1988.

Edward Gordon, vice of post-secondary education and director for the CCL, reported that the night staff has been helping students in the morning, afternoon and evening classes, and that the night staff has been helping students in the morning, afternoon and evening classes.

The staff was selected working in pairs for approximately two hours a night, 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday to Thursday for the first three weeks of classes. The plan is to open a new lot. The night staff will not perform a task that requires a lot of time to do so they can easily be added.

The number of night helpers and the hours they work has been three classes in the morning and night to work. Last week there were seven night helpers at the Center for Continuing Learning, and in the morning, 2000 post-secondary students were working in the morning, the number of night staff.

Although the CCL, research is being completed to determine the night staff's needs, it is not a good idea. All the students are about 2000 in the morning, CCL students are working in the morning, and the night staff are working in the morning.

But Gordon, a post helper for three years, said that the night staff is working in the morning, and the night staff is working in the morning, and the night staff is working in the morning.

Long Gordon, post helper and night staff member, reported that the night staff is working in the morning, and the night staff is working in the morning, and the night staff is working in the morning.

Ed Gordon and Scott Dick take a note for the arrival of night students at CCL.
